Tide rising with high tide at 4:33 p.m. Seals were divided almost evenly on both sides of the beach, with a space in the middle of the sand (about 15' wide) empty except for sea gulls. Snorkelers observed about 4:15 pm going onto the beach, walking between the seal groups, and entering the water. No seals were flushed, though several were disturbed. Photos were taken. An adult female (?) was observed with a band around the middle near the sea wall. It may be an object or scarring. Couldn't tell from my vantage point. This was called in and reported to the ranger.

At times, people were within arm's reach of the resting seals. Two seals were flushed. Photos and video were taken of these instances. At one point, a person with a drone went on the beach, but stayed on the landward side of the rope and kept the drone away from where the seals were. Tide information and water temperature were not recorded, as my phone did not have service at the beach.

Diver with full gear came between submarine rock and West rock and flushed remaining seals. I talk to him. I videotaped him. I really think it was unintended, and that he was uninformed/ignorant. All the seals could go out to seal rock, they appear to be being bombarded by snorkelers, who are approaching too closely and flushing them as well. I educated him that he had caused a flash, and that he was lucky that the Ranger is not present. He apologized profusely and said that he did not know. There is no sign of any ranger present. although the seals could go out to seal rock, they appear to be being bombarded by snorkelers, who are approaching too closely and flushing them as well. Then once all of the seals on the beach were flushed they proceeded to harass the one seal on the rock and take a picture with it and flood it into the water, but the seal didn't move. I got some video of them harassing the seal on the rock and them chasing the seals into the water, however they ran away after they did it so it was hard to follow them and take down their information.

															I have been here around an hour and have witnessed 15 seals attempt to get out of the water. The families of people approach them and they flushed back into the water. The lone seal on the beach was constantly surrounded for "selfie" pics and petting. I have pictures of that as well as plenty of the Wagner boy petting and touching the seal. I went down to talk to the group like a tourist and have video of him telling the people they are allowed to be close and they are a looked to touch the seals. The "selfie" seal finally fled when it had an open path to the water. It appears to be a pup from this year.

Several very late term pregnant seals on beach (about 4 or so) counted 18 mom-pup pairings. People walking on seawall - but no problems. 3 people crossed over steps barrier and walked toward seawall on landward side - kept looking over their shoulders. Ranger did not observe - but Chris (docent) had taken photos of the 3 which he transmitted to the ranger. All in all - good day for the seals.at the beach.

David Johnson and maybe John Leek. If it had been low tide they would have been on the sand area. They did touch the sand with their feet/fins, but feet were ankle deep in the water at the time.
1722	02/07/2015	1:00 PM	Sat	Nancy	0	0	2	67	0	12					David Johnson and another snorkeler swam out from Shell Beach and immediately swam into Casa Beach. One of the divers even stood up on the sand, but was still in the water. A lifeguard went down to the beach to try to stop them from coming up onto the beach, but since it was David Johnson they clearly knew not to come up onto the beach. The Ranger was notified and his comment was "I know who they are" and he did nothing else. A flush of 12 seals was caused. The 2 snorkelers immediately left. This was an intentional flush.  Note: there are 2 abandoned pups on the beach, Ocean Blue is there with her mother and a very tiny emaciated sea lion pup is up on the wall. The sea lion pup fell down at one point and climber back up. Very pregnant seals are also on the beach.

The one on shell beach took off with tide, the one at cove rescued I assume was in their truck right after cove. SW arriving sometime this morning to observe all 3 at Casa. SW has up to date photos of Precious and the situation &amp; I'll try to find out if a rescue is planned.                      All rescue centers are swamped trying to figure out what is going on out in that big ocean. * I only stayed till 9:45am too much negative talk came to enjoy the seals &amp; work on rescues. There is so much beauty at the beach feel so grateful to see 99% healthy seals &amp; absorb the greatness of the beach being closed and protected at least during the day. Glad to see mom and ocean blue enduring any night time activities.                      Tourists are so excited about the seals glad to chat and point out all the beauty. I definitely want tourists to fall in love with the seals and come back not leave with a heavy heart they are doomed. Lastly I was informed the pro beaches were at S Casa for beach clean-up.

															Observed man and woman walking on to rock at tip of breakwater due to low tide and no surf. All 33 seals flushed. Contacted couple when they returned to sidewalk. Visitors from Virginia. Never been to La Jolla before. Not aware of seals. Instructed them of their responsibilities and released.

															Ashlyn and I went onto the rocks west of the seawall and kept people back from the three pregnant seals resting on the only human accessible rock. All the other seals were spread out on other rocks and visitors did not want to wade in the cold waters to get to them.

															Arrived at 3:15pm - no seals on beach but many footprints. Tide very low - only about 1/4 of seawall under water at water level. Few seals scattered on periphery - 2 on seaward side of seawall on rocks - even with public within 20 feet. Few seals (about 8) on north rocks across from high rise. Variety of birds - 1 egret, cormorants on north rocks, sea gulls (two different species) 2 willets ( I think - straight bill). Left at 4:20 with 4 seals approaching the shore but remaining in the water.

2262	12/04/2014	1:15 PM	Thu	RG	0	0	0	165	0	0				low	The lil 911 malnourished sea-lion from alligator rock was rescued yesterday along with another 911 lil sea-lion pup. Went beach searching found one tucked deep in a nook on cove beach & it was Nano. It was like finding a pot of gold at the end of a rainbow. The other lil one was on main cliffs in the brushes! While working on getting "Nano" rescued a sweetheart of a man named Jack came & took me to the lil one hidden in brush & a double rescue happened. Believe the one in the brush is "Lil Lamb". I thanked Jack had been searching for Lil Lamb and shocked how far she climbed away from colony. Both sea-lions alive getting urgent care Heavy black heart!

There were seals all the way across the beach and if these people had continued walking onto the beach, a flush would definitely have occurred. I went and spoke to them and the young guy told me that it was a public beach.

He told me that he was with his daughter, whom I saw previously, and that he was just using it for fun, but was taking videos/photos with it. He also told me that he used 4 batteries that could stay allow the drone to stay in the air for approximately 100 minutes at a cost of $2000 for drone and batteries. He said that the drone was not able to zoom in from far above, and that it would have to go lower to do that.

															FYI - Ellie took of Fri was waiting to make sure pupping season was closed lol! I'll send Fri's pics later...miss her Juvi with line took off Lucky seal pup is a feisty alert seal who just growled & chased a seagull across the beach. 1 seagull got a lil nip of the wound & Lucky said "I don't think so" & is on high alert ready for some flipper kicks! Music playing from one DVD (?) player. 4 Snorkeelers and children swimming. Later three adults entered on east side going toward caves. People walking freely everywhere. 4 seal heads bobbing up inm water. Nightmare in people climbing up the rails where the vstairs are on the seawall. Waves were heavy enough to splash over wall with olots of screams. Easy to clear people by telling them it is time for seals to come up on beach, however three seals tried to beach, but did not stay. Lifeguards in vicinity, but did not clear people off seawall.

A gigantic, huge male sea lion came and sat next to the pups on the rock in the water. One pup took one look and scooted right away from him. He hung out for awhile and then swam off.  5 pups on the rock off shore, 1 swimming.  When I left zero seals on the beach. 5 people behind the rope and lots of people on the seawall. Everyone was climbing up and over the fence like it was normal. You would never guess that the easy access to the seawall was closed.

3425	08/02/2014	6:30 PM	Sat	Ellen	6	22	0	12	0	0	ovc	70	74	med	At 7:00, I easily cleared beach on seaward side, asking people to let the seals emerge and come on the beach. Everyone cooperated, except the Waggoner twins - who were running from the seaward side of the seawall to the western side of the Casa beach. No seals were flushed.  At 7:45, the elephant seal came on the beach, and when I left at 8:15, there were 4 on the sand and 12 on the rocks.

															There were 28 people in the seaward side of the rope when I arrived. Just one small brown pup on the rock inside the wall and one pup on sub rock. The Waggoner twins came very close to the small pup (see pics) to get attention and encourage others to get close. Lisa and I kept people back though. Please look at the third pic of the pup. It looks like it may have a large gash on the back of the neck. It is molting, but this may be an injury.

															The seals were very skittish today but by 7:30 a group of about 20 seemed like they were going to be okay if nobody moved suddenly. We posted ourselves at the foot of the stairs when we got everyone behind the rope and asked each group of people coming down to please stay back as far as possible because the seals were coming in for the night and explained how important that was for the seals... ie Docenting stuff! There was one snorkler that Ondraya talked to before he went in and he promised to exit on another beach. As far as we know he did but not before he scared the poor lil guy off of the rocks by the wall.(no pic, sorry)

The pup with the rope line came on the beach first and stayed the longest. By the time I was leaving at least 10 seals were in the pool about to haul out.

3647	07/01/2014	7:00 PM	Tues	Nancy	0	5	0	0	0	0					Zero seals on the beach, lots of people at water's edge, seals wanting to come up. So many footprints on the beach there. Asian woman with tiny girl kept trying to touch the pup that was trying to come up onto the beach and wouldn't listen to me or even look at me. So rude. What a nightmare it is just a few people cross the rope and then when the seals come up, the crowd just rushes across the rope to harass the seals. I shooped all the people behind the rope and kept others from crossing at the same time (the woman with the tiny girl wouldn't listen and neither would a guy and his girlfriend but finally group pressure from everyone who complied made them move behind the rope). And then 40 seals rushed up onto the beach. The pups just immediately shut their eyes and went to sleep. My heart swells with happiness seeing the pups sleep. When I left everyone was behaving and the seals were doing fine.

When she emerged in about 20 minutes she sat near east cliffs but encouraged people to cross over the rope and play on the wet side. Many people and children followed her bidding.

3793	06/10/2014	5:45 PM	Tues	Nancy	2	1	0	70	0	0					A young woman came down to the beach, crossed the rope and waded in the water while her male companion stood on the stairs and watched. I asked her to please stay behind the rope and she ignored me and then waved at me. When she left I tried to speak to her about flushing the seals/citation and she said the beach was public and she knew her rights and would return today and do it again. Rude. I'm just glad she didn't flush the seals.
